Treatment of Opioid Use Disorder Course

Updated: July 2024
Online Course

Overview

The ASAM Treatment of Opioid Use Disorder Course provides eight hours of education essential for providers to identify, assess, diagnose, and manage the treatment of patients with opioid use disorder (OUD). Through interactive and application-focused learning experiences, participants will explore misconceptions, stigma, and complexities associated with OUD and the use of medications to treat OUD, as well as how to address it for policies, systems, providers, and patients. Participants will gain an understanding of the epidemiology and neurobiology of opioid use disorder as well as opioid pharmacology, with a focus on medication-first treatment of OUD. Participants will examine medication and psychosocial treatment options and best practices for initiating and maintaining the treatment of OUD in hospital, office-based, and other outpatient settings. Emphasizing harm reduction or outcome-directed care, this course equips participants with the knowledge and skills to develop a low-threshold
